To the children
who have lost their father to scared policeman,
to the children
who have been taken away from their own parents because of their own skin color,
to the children
whose parents went to jail because dealing contraband was the only way to survive in a Caucasian's world,
to the children
who were dropped off at the border because their parents were taken away for a pretty penny, for the children
who still move forward even with their feet stuck.
